Will you take my hands in your own, dear, And keep them soft and warm? Will you teach me to trust each word you say? Will you keep my feet so they never can stray?

Will you be my guide in the one right way, My refuge in every storm? Then I'll lovingly follow wherever you guide,

Can I promise to follow you without fear?

Though our way may lie through a desert All through the journey, safe by your side,

You shall lead me everywhere. It is sweeter to walk by faith than sight, If only you feel you are going aright. May I trust you always to find the light,

And guide me safely there?

EDWARD BROWN, STOKER.

'Polly," I says, one day after my convalescence and we were taking a bit of a walk in the churchyard, "ain't this heavenly?"

"And you feel better?" says she, lay-ing her hand on mine. Better!" I says, taking a long draught of the soft, sweet-scented air, and filling my chest; "better, old girl! I feel as if I were growing backwards into a boy."

"And you fifty last week!" she says. 1-tf forty-seven next week." and you

And then we sat thinking for a bit. 'Polly," I says at last, as I sat there lrinking in that soft breeze, and feeling it give me strength, "it's worth being ill to feel as I do now."

For you see I'd been very bad, else I dare say I'm not the man to go hanging about churchyards and watching funerals; I'm a stoker, and my work lies in steamers trading to the East. I'd come home from my last voyage bad with fever, caught out in one of those nasty, hot, bad smelling ports—been carried home to die, as my mates thought; and it was being like this, and getting better, that had set me thinking so seriously, and made me so quiet; not that I was ever a noisy sort of man, as any one who knows me will say. And now, after getshe said nothing—only put down the heard of again.

Polly never thought I should get better, and one time no more did I; for about a month before this time, as I lay hollow-eyed and yellow on the bed, knowing, too, how bad I looked-for I used to make young Dick bring me the looking-glass every morning—the doctor came as usual, and like a blunt Englishman I put it to him flat.

"Doctor," I says, "you don't think I shall get better?" and I looked him straight in the face.

"Oh, come, come, my man!" he says, smiling, "we never look at the black side like that."

"None of that, doctor," I says; "out with it like a man. I can stand it: I've been expecting to be drowned or blown up half my life, so I shan't be scared at what you say. "Well, my man," he says, "your

"All right, doctor, I says; "I understand; you mean that unless you can get a new plate in the boiler, she won't stand another voyage."

"Oh, come! we won't look upon it as a hopeless case," he says; "there's always hope;" and after a little more talk, he shook hands and went away.

Next day when he came, I had been thinking it all over, and was ready for him. I don't believe I was a bit better; in fact, I know I was drifting fast, and I saw it in his eye as well.

I waited till he had asked me his different questions, and then just as he was getting up to go, I asked him to sit "Polly, my dear," I says, "I just want a few words with the doctor;" and she put her apron up to her eyes and went out, closing the door after her very softly, while the doctor looked at me very curious like, and waited for me to

"Doctor," I says, "you've about given me up, There, don't shake your head, for I know Now don't you think I'm afraid to die, for I don't believe I am, but look here; there's seven children down stairs, and if I leave my wife a widow with the few peunds I've been able to save, what's to become of them? Can't you pull me through?"

"My dear fellow," he says, honestly.

"I've done everything I can for your

"That's what you think, doctor," I says, "but look here: I've been at sea thirty years, and in seven wrecks. It's been like dodging death with me a score of times. Why, I pulled my wife there regularly out of the hands of death, and I'm not going to give up now. I've

"Stop, stop," he says, gently.
"You're exciting yourself."
"Not a bit," I says, though my voice was quite a whisper. "I've had this over all night, and I've come to think I must be up and doing my duty."
"But, my good man"—he began.
"Listen to me, doctor, I says. "A score of times I might have given up and been drowned, but I made a fight for it, and was saved. Now I mean to make a fight for it, here, for the sake of the west coast of Africane one of the heaviest came one of the heaviest cam

"That's better, doctor," I says. "Now look here, sir, speaking as one who has sailed the seas, it's a terrible stormy time with me; there's a lee shore close at hand, the fires are drownsail there's no chance for me. Now, then, doctor, can you get up a bit of sail?"

"I'll go and send something that will quiet you," he said, rising.

"Thankey, doctor," I says, smiling to and he kept us all at the pumps, turn myself. "And now look here, I'm not and turn in spells, but we might as well swim to safety. If that fails, and I can it was no use, and we gave up. shall go down into the great deep calmhand to my little ones.'

He went away, and I dropped asleep, worn out with my exertion.

When I woke, Polly was standing by the bedside watching me, with a bottle and glass on the little table.

As soon as she saw my eyes open, she shook up the stuff, and poured it into a wine glass.

"Is that what the doctor sent?" I

"Yes, dear; you were to take it di-

"Then I shan't take it," I says. "He's give me up, and that stuff's only to keep me quiet. Polly, you go and for the boats, and two of the passen-make me some beef tea, and make it gers cut loose a couple of the women; She looked horrified, poor old girl,

I saw her for I held out my shaking hand for it, took a moment on the top of the ridge, and the glass, and let it tilt over-there was then she plunged down the other side only about a couple of teaspoonfuls in out of our sight-and that of everyit, and the stuff fell on the carpet.

The doctor didn't come till late next day, and I was lying very still and drowsy, half asleep like, but I was awake enough to hear him whisper to Polly, "Sinking fast;" and I heard her give and the mer who had tried to launch sumption of hams in the city amounts to such a heart-broken sob that as the her gone-skipper and mate as well. next great wave came on the sea where I was floating, I struck out with all my might, rose over it, and floated gently down the other side.

For the next four days-putting it as a drowning man striving for his life like a true-hearted fellow-it was like great foaming waves coming to wash over me, but the shore, still in sight, and me trying hard to reach it.

And it was a grim, hard fight; a dozen times I could have given up, folded my arms, and said good bye to the dear old watching face safe on shore; but a look at that always cheered me, and I fought on again and again, till at last the sea seemed to go down, and, in utter weariness, I turned on my back to float restfully with the tide tearing me shoreward, till I touched the sands, crept up them, and fell down forn out, to sleep in the warm sun-safe

That's a curious way of putting it, you may say, but it seems natural to me to mix it up with the the igs of sea-going life, and the manner is which I've seen so many fight hard for their lives. It was just like striving at the midst of a storm to me, and when at last I did fall into a deep sleep, I felt urprised-like to find myself lying in mown bed, with Polly watching by mes; and when I stretched out my hand and took hers. she let loose that which she had kept hidden from me before and, falling on her knees by my bedsid, she sobbed for very joy.

'' As much beef-tea ar brandy as you can get him to take," to doctor says, that afternoon; and it with n't long before I got from slops to solidity and then was sent, as I told you, into he country to get strong, while the doctor got no end of praise for the cure he ad made.

I never said a word tough, even to Polly, for he did his be; but I don't think any medicine wo d have cured me then.

And very pitiful it was to see them fight-ing hard at first and clinging to the side, but only to grow weaker, half-drowned as they were; and I saw two sink down at last, and hang drooping like from their lashings, dead, for not a soul could do them a turn.

I was holding on by the shrouds when the mate got to the skipper's side, and I saw in his blank face what he was telling him. Of course we couldn't hear his words in such a storm, but we didn't want to, for his lips said plainly enough: "She's sinking!"

Next moment there was a rush made place was made for them before the first boat was too full, and she was lowered and was about to beg of me to take hold down, cast off, and a big wave carried

There were only seven of us now, and I could see beside the three women lashed to the side, and only one of them was alive; and for a bit no one moved, everybody being stunned-like with horror; but there came a lull, and feeling that the steamer was sinking, I shouted out to the boys to come on, and we ran to the last boat, climbed in, and were casting off, when I happened to catch sight of the women lashed under the bulwarks there.

For a moment I shut my eyes, and then began to lower; but I was obliged to open them again, and as I did so I saw a wild. scared face, with long wet hair clinging round it, and a pair of little white hands were stretched out to me as if for help.

" Hold hard!" I shouts. "No, no!" roared out two or three there isn't a moment!" and as the boat was being lowered from the davits. I made a jump, caught the bulwarks with my hands, and climbed back on board, just as the boat kissed the water, was unhooked, and floated away.

Then as I crept, hand-over-hand, to the girl's side, whipped out my knife and was cutting her loose, while her weak arms clung to me, I felt a horrible feeling of despair come over me, for the boat was leaving us, and I knew what a coward I was at heart, as I had to fight with myself so as not to leave the girl to her fate, and leap overboard to swim for my life. I got the better of it, though went down on my knees so as not to see the boat, and got the poor, trembling,

As soon as I got over the horror of the feeling, a sort of stony despair came over me, but when I saw that little pale, appealing face at my side, looking to me for help, that brought the manhood back, and in saying encouraging things to her I did myself good.

My first idea was to make something that would float as but I gave that up that would float us, but I gave that up directly, for I could feel that I was help-less, and getting the poor girl more into shelter, I took a bit of tobacco in a sort of stolid way, and sat down with a cork life-buoy over my arm—one which I had cut leose from where it had hung forgotten behind the wheel.

But I never used it, for the storm went down fast, and the steamer floated

What they Eat. To get some idea of the enormous eating power of guests who reside in hotels, it is only necessary to say that in one ordinary day's feedings one of the leading hotels in New York city consumes 1,959 pounds of beef, short loins and ribs, 1,800 pounds of mutton chops, nearly 4,000 pounds of spring lamb, 80 dozens of sweetbreads and 1,000 pounds of the hind quarters of veal for roasting and cutlets. The same hotels averaged 40 pounds a day of prime corned beef, or from 1,400 to 1,600 pounds of corned beef per week. Extra beef, which only includes the four quarters, and excludes the hides, fat and offal, brings $13 to $14 a hundred weight at the yards. The best comes from Illinois, and it is superior to the beef raised in any other State in the Union. Many butchers will, however, tell their customers that the beef which comes from Texas is native to Illinois. Ohio sends a fair quality of beef. But if it were not for the vast quantities brought from Texas to the city beef would bring fifty cents a pound in the market steadily. Dutchess county and Orange county occasionally send some fancy beef to private parties, but it is only a drop in the ocean. Some meat is hardly fit to eat when brought to market, and one morning at Washington market Superintendent Devoe seized no less than 357 quarters of bob yeal, which were almost in a state of putrefaction. This shows the danger formerly encountered by housewives who were fond of roast veal or nice little cutlets. The worst kind of beef brings at the yards $8 a hundred weight, and Texan beef brings about $9.50 a hundred when it is in good body else; for how long she lived, who condition. About 250 goats and kids I saw the tears come in her eyes, but can say? Shade Trees. Many farmers now see how much they have missed it by permitting the wholesale destruction of forest trees upon their lands. From the nakedness of the country, droughts are becoming com-mon. From the scarcity of timber trees, the cost of fencing and erecting buildings is annually increasing. But there is one way whereby amends may partly be made. Let there be one united plan to have rows of beautiful and useful trees set out on both sides of all our public highways. Let sugar trees, walnut trees, oak trees, chestnut trees, lo-cust trees, catalpa trees, silver-leafed poplar trees, etc., stretch their long ave-nues in every direction all over the coun-try. How it would relieve the nakedness of the land! What a grateful shade they would give to the weary traveler! The value of farms would become almost immediately enhanced as soon as these rows of beautiful trees were plant-ed out. And in the distant future, when those trees should arrive at maturity of growth, the value of the timber itself would become a most important item. Let grangers and others take hold of this matter.

The Cattle Show at Concord.

The Middlesex Agricultural Society held its eighty-first annual exhibition. this week, on their extensive and convenient grounds, in the old and historic town of Concord. This being our first visit, we could not but be instructed and entertained, on our trip from the terminus of the Middlesex Branch to the fair grounds, by a companion who remembers well when the "cattle show" was held in the square in front of the old Middlesex Hotel; and the importance the farmers of this section attach to it, was best illustrated by the ground and buildings which are to-day the site for the annual exhibitions.

The first day, Tuesday, was the business day,-devoted to awarding prizes to the different competitors for honors as growers of vegetables, makers of bread, churners of butter, knitters of all sorts of goods, florists, grape growers, poultry raisers, stock breeders, etc., and trials of working and matched horses, and oxen.

The stallion race was the first thing on the programme, but the rain was falling so heavily at the time, it was postponed, and the visitors amused themselves in viewing the attractions afforded by the tables in the main hall. The Governor, and other invited guests, arrived at noon, and after making a tour of the building, the procession for the upper hall, where the dinner was served, was formed, and to the music of the band, the company were soon seated at the amply spread tables.

A few hours at the cattle show are calculated to give one an appetite, and the President showed his good sense by giving nearly an hour in which to satisfy the cravings of nature, and discuss the good things provided. Mr. John Cummings, President of the Society, then rapped for order, and in a neat speech briefly stated show was excellent; the display of pears exceeded any thing ever shown here, and he believed elsewhere. The vegetables were what might be expected, and if the early frosts had destroyed some of the best grape specimens, he was not ashamed of the display. He was followed by Gov. Gaston, who he introduced very neatly, stating that it was the first time in many years, that the Society had been thus honored. Gov. Gaston made a very acceptable after-dinner speech, and was followed by Hon. J. K. Tarbox, Judge Brooks, and Hon. E. Rockwood Hoar. The last gentleman made several very happy hits. He was called on by the President to relate his experience in changing Bermuda potatoes to Early Rose. He replied as follows: On the 19th of April visitors to this old town), he indulged in a ton. little extravagance, and bought half a bushel of Bermuda potatoes. They were not all eaten, and being, like Mrs. Gilpin, of a frugal turn of mind, he planted the peck or so that was left. His neighbors all told him that, like all other Southern productions when planted in the North, they would not come to maturity but would run to vines, producing no fruit. However, he planted them side by side

Arlington was well represented in the display, both of fruit and vegetables. Dr. R. L. Hodgdor took the first and some other premiums on pears, and Mr. John Fillebrown also bore off honors. The display of vegetables, by Warren W. Rawson, while less conspicuous than that of Mr. John Cammings, of Woburn, awarded the highest premium, was very fine, and received substantial awards from the committee. Want of space, as well as time, prevents our giving a more full list of the premiums. We will give our home list entire in our next issue.

premiums, though exhibited. Among the number was the Arlington Hand Seed Drill, manufactured by Mr. S. C. Buckman, so well and favorably known in Arlington.

The weather on Thursday was rather more favorable, and a goodly number were in attendance to witness the trials on the race track, which our reporter informs us were very satisfactory. We hope the society will be favored with clearer and better weather next year.

PRESENTATION AND SUPPER. - The Highland Hose Company entertained those that took a part with them at the Firemen's Muster, at Lynn, on the 15th ult., together with some members of the Charlestown fire department, and some invited guests of Arlington, numbering about 45 in all, at their hose house, on Friday evening, of last week, the occasion being the presentation of a solid silver trumpet, by the "Red Jacket" Hose Company, of Charlestown, which was won at a former trial, to the "Highland's." The hose house presented quite a nest appearance, being profusely decorated with flags and flowers. On entering the room, the first object to attract attention, was a life-like "fire scene," finely executed by the Neilsen Brothers, fresco painters, of this town. Above this was a banner, bearing the following:

"When hissing flames around us fly, we'll save your homes, your lives, or die."

Owing to the sickness of Capt. Paine, of the "Red Jackets," he was unable to Wednesday was the day of the fair, attend, and Mr. Hadley, expressman, of East Lexington, brought the trumpet out, and presented it, in behalf of the "Red Jacket" Hose Company.

HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION. - The annual exhibition of the Horticultural Society, occurred last week, in Music Hall, Boston. Arlington was well represented, and bore off a large number that the exhibition of stock deserved only of the prizes, -more than any other one praise; considering the season, the apple town. St. Louis has the advantage of an extensive river traffic, a central position, and an earlier joon, a start in the race. Chicago has the advantage of a vast lake business, an immense railroad connection, and is the distributing point of the great grain States of the Northwest; also the additional enterprise and spirit of a more Northern and freedom loving people. To a casual observer there is no comparison between the two cities in the business section. It is an interesting fact to many that Park Avenue has been completed so thoroughly, including a side-walk, to the Belmout line, and that the Belmont side is also so nearly done. But the best of all is that, by very excellent management, only a little more than half of the money appropriated for the Arlington portion of the work was used. SECRETARY DELANO'S RETIREMENT .-We do not remember the case of a retiring Cabinet officer who ever thought it worth while to write so long and claborate a letter of resignation as Secretary Delano has just done. This would seem to imply that he is conscious of the necessity of explaining his record to the satisfaction of the public, for, of course, as between the President. and himself there was no need of many words in this direction. It would be of little consequence, however, to discuss the contents of the letter, for public atthe Secretary's successor, and the permanent popular judgment respecting Mr. Delano's administration of his department will be slowly made up, regardless of whatever he may allege at the present moment. That he does not go out of office with the prestige enjoyed by some of his colleagues is sufficiently apparent, and while this fact may do him great injustice, and in that event will be sure to be rectified in time, it has of late so far interfered with his Peirce, in the building on the corner of efficiency as to render his retirement advisable and generally acceptable to the public. The changes that have been recently made in the Cabinet have been decided improvements, and their extension to the Interior Department, by the selection of a man of the stamp of Messrs. Bristow, Jewell and Pierrepont, will give assurance that the President comprehends the requirements of the exigency and is doing his part to meet them. The names of Judge Tatt and Commissioner Pratt, among those already mentioned for the succession, Episcopal services will be held in are encouraging in this respect, and

"Remember the Salbath Day, and keep it wholly." was the text at the Unitarian Church. last Sabbath, although it was read to us "Holy." The idea was to have better and stronger and more christian qualities than are now shown by people in general. No one doubts but what all these good qualities now exist in the hearts of our friends and neighbors. Having listened attentively to Rev. Mr. Westcott, we came to the conclusion that he was right, and that lots of our acquaintances would have enjoyed the sermon as well as we did. If they would only come out to church they would find that preaching is intended to do good; that the pastor is in earnest, and is really interesting, and gives for a sermon just what the present meds of the hearers require. No matter what your theology may be, your common sense will be gratified, and if your theology is mortified you had better drop it. The singing was really excellent, each part being well sustained, and Mrs. T. presided at the organ, which is a warrant that the choir was well supported. With such preaching and such a pleasing choir, the old church ought soon to be filled as in olden times. We wish it to be so.

THE ARLINGTON.

With and without Hot Closets .- Every Range warranted.

BAND.—A few weeks ago the band seremaded Hon. B. T. Batcheller, of Hancock street, and he, not being prepared to receive them at the time, invited them to repeat the visit, when he might appropriately respond. On Wednesday evening, of this week, the second visit was made, and the band were entertained with a collation.
Music, before and after this, rendered the evening a pleasant one.

66 NOTWITHSTANDING MY ARLINGTON
PORTABLE RANGE has for the past four years an 1 is still having such spiendid success, yet I desire to get up a Range with many new and very desirable improvements, which should far surpass the first Arlington; and I now take pleasure in announcing to my numerous friends and customers that my ENT RE NEW RANGE is now in the market (Sept. 1st, 1875), and would invite those in wans of the most spiendid RANGE ever offered for sale to examine it thoroughly inside and out, and I believe they will all agree with me that the equal of this work has never before been seen. I have for many years made it a specialty in my business to get up the best possible improvements, to work nothing but the very best quality of stock, and to have the work made in the most thorough manner. In this way I am enabled to turn out work that is in reality, as well as in name, strictly first-class work.

How they Learn.

The rapidity with which females adapt themselves to the circumstances and fashions with which they are surrounded, and especially the fashions, is simply marvelous. One Monday a lady in a Western city, who employs several do-mestics, got a new table girl, just arrived in the city from rural districts—a brighteyed, rosy-cheeked dameel who blushed whenever any of the male members of the household looked at her; a girl whose hair was combed smoothly back from off her tanned forehead; whose dress had sleeves to it, came up to her throat and down to her feet. On Tuesday her hair went up on to the top of her head, and was coiled up over a something; on Wednesday she cut the sleeves off her dress, turned it in at the throat, pinned it back and humped it out behind, and could look all the men in the house square in the face for half an hour without the hue of modesty showing through her chalk complexion. Thursday she completed her degradation by cutting off all but an inch or two of her front hair.

These symptoms usually originate from a disordered condition of the stomach or a torpid liver.

Persons so affected, if they take one or two heavy colds, and if the cough in these cases be suddenly checked, will find the stomach and liver clogged, remaining torpid and inactive, and almost before they are aware the lungs are a mass of sores, and ulcerated, the result of which is death.

Michigan Lands FOR SALE: The Lands of the Jackson, Lansing and Saginaw Railroad Company are Now OFFERED FOR SALE.

They are situated along its railroad and contain large tracts of excellent FARMING and PINE Lands.

The farming lands include some of the most fertile and well-watered hardwood lands in the State. They are timbered mainly with hard-maple and beech; soil black, sandy loam, and abound in springs of purest water. Michigan is one of the least indebted and most vater. Michigan is one of the least indebted and most prosperous States in the Union, and its farmers have a greater variety of crops and resource than any Western State. While some of the prairie States may produce corn in great abundance, they have no other resource, and when this crop fails destitution follows, as has been the case the past year in Kansas and Nebraska.
